Oregon law requires that you be informed that the insurance company to whom you are applying for insurance or your agent will request a loss history report relating to you or the property to be insured.

You may request a free copy of this report from the consumer reporting agency.

Your insurance company will use the loss history report for underwriting and rating purposes as allowed by law.

Your insurance company requests a loss history report only once at the time you apply for insurance. An exception to this is if you purchase another residence and add it to your existing policy.

Other Exceptions:

You may obtain additional information about this process from your insurance company or your agent.
